Feeling Bookish?

You might have heard us say before that we're all about building better communities. But we don't think a community is made up of buildings, roads and parks alone – as important as they are. In fact, a community doesn't start and end at the gates of a development. Wherever Satterley builds, there's so much to explore in your local area, as well as within the community itself.

Of course, when you're new to a home and a neighbourhood, you have a lot on your mind. So we thought, while you get settled, you might want to leave some of the exploring to us. That's the idea at the centre of the Satterley Neighbourhood Explorer.

To help you discover what there is to see and do in your new patch, we'll do some digging about for services, places or venues in the local area on your behalf and report back to you about them.

Today, we're taking a look at Wyndham's public library network.

Feeling Bookish?

When was the last time you visited your local library?

Are you one of those people who thinks libraries are just as important as the local coffee shop? Or was the last time you stepped foot in a library during your primary school days?

If it's been a while, you'll be pleased to know that most council-run libraries aren't the musty old book rooms they were 30 or 40 years ago. There's still a huge selection of physical books to borrow – novels, graphic novels, non-fiction, young adult fiction, children's books, picture books, and more – but there's also free access to more-than-handy digital technology.

At Wyndham's libraries, for example, members can connect to free wireless internet, get onto a desktop PC, use a free scanner or even borrow e-books – they're books you can download to your computer (at no cost) and don't need to physically return; they simply expire after a fortnight.

Free iMacs with Creative Suite are also available at Point Cook and Wyndham Vale, while genealogy computers (for looking up information on your family history) are available at the Plaza Library in Werribee.

Find out more

You can find out more about the libraries, joining as a member (you don't join a single library; you join the network and get access to all five) and much more by visiting the Wyndham libraries website, by taking a look at their quick overview brochure or by contacting the libraries individually on the numbers above.

Happy reading!
