About Brassall

Brassall is a suburb of Ipswich, Queensland, Australia.

Brassall is located within the Brisbane metropolitan area. The origin of the suburb name is unknown. Was also known as Hungry Flats, as was a stop over for bullock teams that were transporting logs from Pine Mountain to Hancocks saw mill at North Ipswich. It was named by an early surveyor by the name of James Warner although he never gave its meaning or origin. Brassall was a separate shire with its own council from March 1860 until 1 January 1917 when the area became part of Ipswich. The suburb was officially bounded and named in 1991.

The locality of Brassall Heights is located in Brassall. (Source: Wikipedia)
